

Fairfield Police Department

Fairfield, New Jersey

Signup to receive text alerts from Fairfield PD...

Be part of another first brought to you by the Fairfield Police Department. The first New Jersey Police Department to use Internet based social networking to keep citizens informed.

<http://www.twitter.com>

Using the immensely popular social networking site Twitter, the Fairfield Police Department will post brief messages, as necessary, related to significant events occurring within Fairfield to those who sign up to receive the messages. Users must go to <http://www.twitter.com> to register for a free account.

Any interested parties may register at <http://www.twitter.com>. Once registered, users can input their cellular telephone numbers under the Settings/Devices tab and configure specifically how and when they would like to be notified when an update is received from other Twitter users they decide to "follow." Users needing help in setting up their account should refer to the Help section on Twitter's website. Then simply begin the "Find People" process and decide who you would like to "Follow." The Fairfield Police Department uses the Twitter screen name of "fairfieldpd". Those to choose to participate should remember that if they elect to receive these messages on their cellular telephones regular text messaging usage guidelines with their cellular carrier will apply.